Index to the First Eight Volumes of the
Publications of the Lebanon County
Historical Society

Introduction

It has been truthfully said that in this age, when knowledge is so diverse and of such wide scope, a learned person is not one whose brain is a store-house of facts, but rather one who knows where to find a record of the facts, when he is in need of them; not so much one whose information is abundant and extensive, as one well-acquainted with works of reference, and versed in making use of them to the best advantage. Such a person values an index. It is to him not only a useful but a necessary tool in his work. The value of a book is greatly enhanced thereby.

With the idea of rendering the publications of the Lebanon County Historical Society more serviceable, the writer thought an index to their contents would not be amiss, nay, would be a help to those wishing to make use of the varied and valuable information contained in their pages. Though it meant no little amount of tedious work, yet he thought the labor worth the while.

Besides being a great convenience, the use of an index is a saving of time and of money, if, as is often said, "time is money."

Society Publications

The publications of our Society show a wide diversity of knowledge, and contain much valuable information. This is found not only in the sphere of history—civil, political, military, ecclesiastical, educational and medical—but also in the fields of geography, topography, etymology, genealogy, biography, legendary and folklore, Indian life, poetry, bibliography, education, metallurgy, ceramics, mining, manufactures, household economy and other spheres of art, science and literature.

Demand and Worth

Our Secretary, Chas. D. Weirick, Esq., informs us there is quite a demand for these publications from widely-spread territory throughout the United States. They are called for by various historical societies, colleges and universities, as well as by individuals.

We are also pleased to learn from outside sources, worthy of consideration, that these publications compare favorably with similar issues of other societies.

Contents

The Lebanon County Historical Society was organized January 14, 1898, and therefore has passed its quadri-centennial (for its founders, see Vol. I, page 2.) In this period of 26 years the Society has issued 110 pamphlets, the titles and authors of which are given hereafter. They embrace 108 papers or treatises by 71 authors, 13 biographical sketches, 8 poems (of which 2 are in Pennsylvania-German), 28 addresses, 6 official documents, 71 "In Memoriams" or biographical sketches of deceased members; besides, reports of officers and committees, and an index, comprising, altogether, 3692 pages. These pages are interspersed with 374 illustrations, including 135 portraits of prominent citizens of the city and county of Lebanon; also cuts of old churches, academies, public houses, and a number of fac-similes. In addition, we have eight maps, plots or plans, which enhance the value of the text, elucidating and clarifying it.

The Index contains 1617 entries and 2375 references, covering 54 pages.

Price

A certain number of the pamphlets mentioned in the succeeding pages are on hand, and may be had on application to the Secretary for 50c a piece.

Membership

A member of the Society pays annual dues of $2.00 and each of the 189 members (December 12, 1924) receives a copy of each pamphlet, as soon as published. Thus, every year he receives in value a full equivalent of his annual dues. In fact, sometimes a single pamphlet more than compensates the receiver for his investment of $2.00 in Society membership. Besides, he has the satisfaction of knowing that he is associated with a band of able and representative men and women, furthering a good cause, in securing from oblivion and transmitting to posterity the record of home life and the heroic deeds of our ancestors. Instead of permitting the past to remain a dead past, he infuses into it new life and enables mankind to profit thereby. Why not become a member and join us in our efforts to resuscitate the past, and increase our fund of knowledge and wisdom?

Library and Museum

In closing, we cannot but think also of a catalog of the Library and Museum, giving titles of books, their authors and donors. Curios, relics and antiques, likewise, should be designated, accompanied with a brief description. Such a catalog would render the Library and Museum much more serviceable to one seeking information. The curios and relics would be enhanced in value, and the donors' memories preserved from oblivion.

INDEX

Note—Pamphlets 1, 2, 3 and 6 of Vol. 1 are paged separately, but if No. 2 is paged with pencil, 13 to 28; No. 3, 29 to 44, and No. 6, 83 to 120, the references in the index will apply.

What is known as the vowel system is used. The initial letter of a word, coupled with the next vowel, determines its place in the index. Thus under A the entries follow this order: A—a, A—e, A—i, A—o, A—u, A—y. So with each letter of the alphabet. In case a word consists of an initial vowel followed only by consonants, it follows the last vowel combination. Thus "Ernst" follows E—y, and "Orth" follows O—y.

This arrangement saves time in looking for an item. For instance, we wish to look for "George Steitz." Instead of being obliged to look over the whole list of 176 items in S, we only need to look over those of S—e, of which there are only 38.

In the references, a dash separates the volume from the page, a comma separates pages, and a semicolon, references. Thus VII—45 means Volume VII, page 45; VI—58, 90 means Volume VI, pages 58 and 90; IV—69; V—83 means volume IV, page 69, and Volume V, page 83.
